Grade 12 CESC – Term 2 Week 9 Student Handout – Core Values of Community Action

Community Engagement, Solidarity, and Citizenship • Term 2, SY 2026–2027 • Nov 9–13, 2026 (ADM / home study)

Name: _____ Section: _____ Date: _____

What you will learn

- Explain the four core values that should guide a community-action initiative: human rights, social equity / social justice, gender equality, and participatory development.
- Tell equality apart from equity, and spot when a plan is for the community instead of with the community.
- Use a simple values checklist on a short local case and suggest one respectful improvement.

Study guide (how to use this at home): Read 15–20 minutes a day on paper or on your phone offline. You do not need to go outside, buy anything, or search the internet. Answer the practice items after the worked examples.

Lesson Notes: Four Core Values (Content C)

Last week you judged whether an initiative was strong (goal, participation, solidarity, results, sustainability). This week asks a deeper question: What values should guide that initiative so it is right for people? In this class, social justice and social equity mean the same idea. Empowerment is a related idea (people gain more ability to act); you will study it more deeply later.

1. Human rights — dignity + equal rights

Meaning: Every person has dignity (worthy of respect just for being a person) and equal basic rights. Being heard in a project that affects your purok protects dignity. Rights protect persons; wishes are wants (wanting a free phone is not the same as the right to be treated with dignity).

Remember: Human rights = dignity + equal rights; being heard protects dignity.

Local example (hypothetical): Officers plan a canal and livelihood meeting for flood-prone puroks in Brgy. Bago. Version A invites only the usual attendees; fisherfolk and SK youth are not asked, yet a poster says “Community consulted.” Version B invites purok leaders, fisherfolk, and SK; residents speak first. Version B better respects human rights because people who are affected are heard. Improve the process; do not shame officers.

2. Social equity / social justice — fair access, not sameness

Meaning: Fair access to services and opportunities (health, schooling, livelihood, safety). Treating people who start unequal as if they already start equal can be unfair. Equality of identical help is not always fair when conditions differ. Equity looks at who starts with less, then opens a fair path — with dignity, never with labels.

Remember: Social equity = social justice here = fair access, not identical help for unequal starts.

Local example (hypothetical): After a storm near Culasi / Roxas waters, Plan Same gives every registered fisher one identical repair kit. Plan Fair gives priority slots and larger kits first to fishers who lost their only boat, with the list checked with the association. Plan Fair shows social equity. Talk about conditions (“lost boats,” “flood-prone”), not insults (“lazy,” “problem purok”).

3. Gender equality — equal rights, voice, and participation

Meaning: Equal rights, equal voice, and equal participation regardless of gender. It is not girls against boys. It is not a fixed “women’s role” or “men’s role.” Reject stereotypes presented as the “right” community role. Voice means your ideas count in the decision — not only who talks loudest.

Remember: Share voice and roles; reject stereotypes as the rule.

Local example (hypothetical): In a Capiz fisherfolk cooperative market day, women help sell catch and keep records. Equal participation means their votes and ideas also shape prices and schedules — not only unpaid side work. In SK work, girls and boys can both chair a committee. A fairer purok meeting rotates speakers and invites women and youth to propose agenda items. Improve voice; do not name classmates to shame.

4. Participatory development — with, not for

Meaning: People who are affected help plan and decide with the community — not only receive a finished plan. “For” the community: outsiders finish the plan, then invite people to clap or clean up. “With” the community: residents, youth, fisherfolk, and women help set the goal, choose the date, and decide how to continue. A one-hour “consultation” after the budget is already fixed is usually still for, not with.

Remember: Participatory development = plan and decide WITH the community, not only for them.

Local example (hypothetical): A mangrove planting morning in Baybay/Culasi is run by a city office; fisherfolk are not asked where to plant and there is little follow-up. A stronger “with” version asks Culasi fisherfolk where to plant and checks seedlings with them monthly so more mangroves survive with local care.

Related idea — empowerment: people gain more ability to act on their needs (skills, voice, organization). Fair access opens the door; empowerment helps people keep walking through it. You will study this more later.

Key Terms (plain words)

Term	Meaning in plain words
Human rights	Dignity + equal basic rights for every person; being heard protects dignity.
Dignity	Being worthy of respect just because you are a person.
Social equity	Fair access to services and opportunities; looks at who starts with less.
Social justice	Same idea as social equity in this class: fair access, not sameness.
Equality vs equity	Equality often means the same help for all; equity means fair help when starts are unequal.
Gender equality	Equal rights, voice, and participation regardless of gender.
Participation	Taking part in planning and doing the work — not only watching.
Participatory development	People plan and decide with the community, not only for them.
Empowerment (related)	Gaining more ability and confidence to act on one's own needs.
Solidarity (earlier)	Standing and working with people as equals for a shared good.
Community action initiative	A planned effort where people work together to address a shared community need.

Worked Examples (study these first)

Example 1 — Which value is missing?

Case: A livelihood meeting poster says "Community consulted," but only the usual officers were invited. Fisherfolk and SK youth who live near the canal were not asked.

Question: Which core value is most clearly weak here?

Step-by-step: (1) Who is affected? Fisherfolk and youth near the canal. (2) Were they heard? No. (3) Being heard protects dignity → this is about human rights. (4) Social equity is about fair access to services; gender equality is about shared voice across genders; participatory development is about planning with people — all related, but the clearest gap is that affected people were not heard.

Answer: Human rights (people affected were not heard; dignity was ignored).

Example 2 — Equal help vs equitable help

Case: After floods, every purok gets the same number of relief packs, even though one purok was underwater and another stayed dry.

Question: Is this equality of identical help, or social equity? What would fairer access look like?

Step-by-step: (1) Identical packs for every purok = sameness. (2) Starts were unequal — one purok flooded first. (3) Social equity looks at who starts with less. (4) A fairer plan: more packs or earlier delivery for the flood-hit purok, without calling anyone a "problem purok."

Answer: This is sameness (equal identical help), not social equity. Fairer access prioritizes the flood-hit purok.

Example 3 — Who was not asked, and how to fix it

Case: A mangrove planting is finished by a city office. Fisherfolk are invited only on planting day to pose for photos. Seedling sites were chosen without them.

Question: Is this with or for the community? Name one fix that strengthens participatory development.

Step-by-step: (1) Plan and site choice were finished before fishers spoke → for, not with. (2) Photos alone are not participation. (3) Fix must increase planning with people: ask fishers where to plant and check seedlings with them monthly.

Answer: For the community. Fix: plan planting sites and follow-up with fisherfolk, not only invite them for photos.

Practice Items (answer on your own paper — no answer key on this handout)

All cases below are hypothetical practice cases for learning. They are not reports of a real program. Improve the plan; do not shame any group. Choose one letter for items 1–6. Write short answers for items 7–8.

1. Officers set the schedule for a Brgy. Bago canal clean-up before anyone living near the canal is asked. A poster still says "Community consulted." Which value is most clearly weak?

A. Social equity, because every purok got the same number of sandbags last year.
B. Human rights, because people affected were not heard.
C. Gender equality, because only girls were asked to cook snacks for the clean-up team.
D. Solidarity, because the poster used the barangay logo.

2. After a storm, fishers who lost their only boat and fishers who still have a boat all receive one identical small repair kit. What does this plan show?

A. Perfect social equity, because the kit list was typed neatly.
B. Gender equality, because kits were given on a weekday morning.
C. Participatory development, because fishers took photos with the kit.
D. Sameness of help that can be unfair when starts are unequal.

3. An SK feeding and reading program rotates who leads the opening talk so girls and boys both practice public speaking. Which value is strongest here?

A. Gender equality (shared voice and roles).
B. Social equity only (identical relief packs for every street).

C. Human rights only (a free phone for every volunteer).
D. Participatory development only (budget fixed before any meeting).

4. A city office finishes a mangrove plan, then invites fishers only to clap and plant for one morning. Which statement is most accurate?

A. This is fully with the community because a morning of planting and photo-taking happened.
B. This is social equity because every fisher got the same shovel.
C. This is mostly for them; planning with fishers is still missing.
D. This is gender equality because the poster used both blue and pink colors.

5. “Girls should always take the minutes because they write neatly.” What should a fair community-action group do?

A. Accept the line as the right role for all meetings forever.
B. Reject the stereotype and rotate roles so voice and tasks are shared.
C. Ask only boys to speak and only girls to serve snacks.
D. Ignore the meeting agenda and decide everything by popular vote online.

6. In this class, which pair of terms is treated as the same idea?

A. Social equity and social justice.
B. Human rights and free gadgets for everyone.
C. Gender equality and girls against boys.
D. Participatory development and planning only after the budget is locked.

7. Rewrite this unfair “same for all” plan into a fairer access plan in one or two sentences: “Scholarship posters are posted only on the barangay hall wall.” (Hint: who might not see the wall? How can access open without shaming anyone?)

Answer: _____

8. Pick one hypothetical initiative (canal clean-up, mangrove planting, SK feeding/reading, fisherfolk market day, or boat repair). Name one weak value and write one improvement that strengthens that value using this stem: “To strengthen _____ in the _____ initiative, we will _____ so that _____.”

Answer: _____

Safe-study note

Study indoors in a cool, ventilated place when you can. Drink safe water. If you feel unwell or unsafe, stop, rest, and tell a trusted adult. Follow your school’s current safety announcement. Submit your answers through the ADM task as instructed by your teacher. This handout does not set a deadline.
